THE TERRORIST HAD BLUE EYES

كانت هناك صحفية من جريدة شارلي ايبندو

There was a young journalist of Charlie Hebdo

وضع سلاح "الكلاشنكوف" على أنفها
و طلب منها أن تتلو القرآن لكي لا تموت

Who has the point of the kalashnikov on her nose and he told her "recite the Koran and I will let your live"

عن من كانت تتحدث !!!!!

and she was reciting in loop, she says he told her so, he had beautiful blue eyes, well, "beautiful"

Toujours sur Facebook, on trouve une copie de la Carte d'Identité Française de Saïd:

Et voici une photo de Chérif, son frère (trouvé par une autre source de haut niveau qui confirme nos informations):

Âgés de 18, 32 et 34 ans, les deux premiers sont français, la nationalité du troisième individu est encore inconnue.

Le Point confirme l'information en indiquant que les deux premiers sont des Franco-Algériens revenus cet été de Syrie. L'un d'entre eux a été jugé en 2008 dans le cadre du démantèlement de la filière irakienne dite du « 190 arrondissement » de Paris. Il avait également été interpellé en 2005, alors qu'il s'appelait à partir pour Damas.

Hamyd était inscrit en Terminale S en 2014 dans un lycée de Charleville-Mézières dans l'académie de Reims (Champagne-Ardenne). L'Union en Ardenne indiquait en fin d'après-midi que le RAID s'était rendu du côté de Reims.

L'un des assaillants présumés, Chérif K., serait bien connu des services de police. Avec une dizaine d'autres, il aurait, entre 2003 et 2005 incité une dizaine de jeunes à partir combattre en Irak. Il avait été interpellé en 2005 au moment où il s'appelait à partir lui-même en Irak. À l'époque, il expliquait à la présidente du tribunal « Plus le départ approchait, plus je voulais revenir en arrière. Mais si je me dégonflais, je risquais de passer pour un lâche », avait-il expliqué à la présidente du tribunal Chérif K. Il avait été condamné à trois ans, dont dix-huit mois avec sursis.

Ce soir, l'horreur porte ces trois noms !

Theme: Media Disinformation, Police State & Civil Rights

Police Commissioner Helric Fredou, Number Two Police Officer of the Regional Service of France's Judicial Police (JP), Limoges, (Haute-Vienne), "committed suicide on the night of Wednesday to Thursday at the police station."

Commissioner Helric Fredou was part of the police investigation into the Charlie Hebdo terror attack.

Terror suspects Cherif and Said Kouachi who were shot dead by police on January 9, spent their high-school years in the Limoges region. No doubt this was the object of Fredou's police investigation. Yet police and media reports state that on that same Wednesday he was involved in a meeting with the family of one of the Charlie Hebdo victims.

On Wednesday, as part of the Charlie Hebdo investigation, he dispatched a team of police officials under his jurisdiction. He is reported to have waited for the return of his team for a debriefing. Immediately following the police debriefing, he was involved in preparing his police report.

According to media reports, he committed suicide at around 1am on Thursday, within hours of the police debriefing. He used his own police weapon, a SIG-Sauer to "shoot himself in the head".

At the time of his death, police claim to have not known the reason for his alleged suicide. This was reflected in their official statements to the media: "It is unknown at this time the reasons for his actions".

However, a back story appears to have been inserted simultaneously, most likely from the very same police media liaisons, who then told the press that Fredou was 'depressed and overworked'. For any law enforcement officer in France, it would seem rather odd that anyone would want to miss the biggest single terror event of the century, or history in the making, as it were. (21st Century Wire.)

"An autopsy was performed at the University Hospital of Limoges, "confirming the suicide"

There has been a total news blackout.

The French media decided or was instructed not to cover the incident. Not news worthy? So much for "Je suis Charlie" and "Freedom of Expression" in journalism.

Likewise, the Western media including all major news services (AP, AFP, Reuters, Deutsche Welle, etc) have not covered the issue.

One isolated report in Le Parisien presents the act of suicide as being totally unrelated to the Charlie Hebdo investigation.

While described as being depressive and suffering from a burnout, police reports state that Helric Fredou's suicide was totally unexpected.

Moreover, it is worth noting that, according to reports, he committed suicide in his workplace, in his office at the police station.

Did he commit suicide? Was he incited to commit suicide?

Or was he an "honest Cop" executed on orders of France's judicial police?

Has his report been released?

These are issues for France's journalists to address. It's called investigative reporting. Or is it outright media censorship?

MOSSAD FALSE FLAG OPERATION

But it has now emerged that the suspected terrorists have been identified after one of the brothers left his ID card in the Citroën C3 they abandoned as they escaped.

It was also reported that two of the machine gun-wielding murderers went to the wrong office in the minutes before the raid on the headquarters of Charlie Hebdo.

After being told by two maintenance workers that the correct location was two doors over, the men are reported to have killed one of the duo before launching their attack on the magazine.

All three suspects were believed to have been living in the Paris commuter town of Gennevilliers.

The classmates of an 18-year-old suspect in the Paris shooting, that occurred yesterday afternoon at the offices of Charlie Hebdo magazine, have protested his innocence by saying that he was in class at the time of the incident in which 12 people were murdered.

Hamyd Mourad was reported to have handed himself to the police at around 11pm last night after he saw his name mentioned on the news and his friends and acquaintances have said that he has an alibi, as they claim he was present in the classrooms that day.

Yve Cresson, who works for a media production company in a building near the offices of satirical newspaper Charlie Hebdo, has been tweeting since the shooting about what he saw and heard.

According to Cresson's Twitter bio, he works for Bayoo, a media company whose offices are near Charlie Hebdo's on the Rue Nicolas Appert.

The first tweets described hearing gunfire:

Echanges de coups de feu rue Nicolas Appert 75011 autour du siège de Charlie Hebdo

Cresson tweeted photos of ambulances taking away the wounded:

— yve cresson (@yvecresson) January 7, 2015

Cresson tweeted that the gunmen originally came to the wrong offices, apparently taking advantage of the mail carrier's arrival to gain entry:

— yve cresson (@yvecresson) January 7, 2015

Cresson later clarified that those shots were fired in his office: "Two armed men entered our offices. They were looking for Charlie Hebdo and left after shooting twice."

Cresson found it puzzling that the men didn't have the right address:

Question:les assassins avaient un calme de pros,mais n'avaient pas repéré les locaux de #CharlieHebdo Ils se sont d'abord trompé d'escalier

— yve cresson (@yvecresson) January 7, 2015

— yve cresson (@yvecresson) January 7, 2015

"The scouting of Charlie Hebdo was very imprecise. They at first got the wrong premises and address."

Cresson also tweeted a photo of cartridge found in his office:

Murdered French Cartoonist Seems To Predict Attack

His last cartoon depicted a figure representing a jihadist in which the headline says: "Still no attack in France" – with the jihadist figure saying "Wait! We still have until the end of January to send our New Year wishes." This was Charb's last cartoon: it was published a few days before the attack that took his life and 11 others in an attack on the offices of Charlie Hebdo, a French magazine where Charb served as editor.

It featured a relatively lifelike picture of Islamic State leader Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, drawn by one of the cartoonists who died in the attack, along with the caption "Best wishes. To you too, Al-Baghdadi." Al-Baghdadi is depicted replying, "And especially good health!" Aside from having no obvious meaning, the tweet is also notable for its timing. It seems to have appeared seconds before the attack took place, with some suggesting that it may have been sent once the gunmen had already opened fire.

NOW WITH THE PARALLEL STORY ON THE SIEGE AT THE KOSHER SUPERMARKET IN PARIS

Terrorist Amedy Coulibaly met former French President Nicolas Sarkozy in 2009, years before Paris murder spree

'I don't know what I'm going to say to him,' Coulibaly, 27 at the time, told the Parisian newspaper. 'I'll start by saying hello!' On Friday, Coulibaly was gunned down by police after a two-day terror spree in which authorities say he killed a policewoman and four hostages at a Jewish grocery in conjunction with the Kouachi brothers, who murdered 12 Charlie Hebdo workers in a sick showing of Islamic extremism.

MORE QUESTIONS:

- The police is looking for 3 people, one is said to be the driver although the video clearly shows that they are only two.
- The offensive cartoon was published in 2011, why attack now?
- The Journal's office was protected by a permanent police patrol for years but this security measure was lifted only a few weeks before and it was downsized to one cop inside the office.
- How did the killers manage to get away without being caught by the police?
- Why did they stop to kill a policeman on foot right on the other side of where all shooting happened?
- The killers are heard Allahu akbar just to make sure everyone knows they are islamist yet they wear masks and don't want to be identified or caught. However, they make a scandal and drive towards the police car.

French far-right Front National (FN) party honorary president Jean-Marie Le Pen says in an interview published in the Russian newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda that the Paris attack at satirical weekly Charlie Hebdo "bears the signature of [French] intelligence services". AFP

According to a report, published in The Independent, founder of France's far right Front National, Jean-Marie Le Pen has said that the Charlie Hebdo massacre may have been the work of an "intelligence agency".

The independent report further says, "The shooting at Charlie Hebdo resembles a secret service operation but we have no proof of that," the newspaper quoted Mr Le Pen as saying. "I don't think it was organised by the French authorities but they permitted this crime to be committed. That, for the moment, is just a supposition."

Turkish president accuses 'the West' of being behind Charlie Hebdo attacks and deliberately 'blaming Muslims' as conspiracy theories sweep the Internet accusing Israel of orchestrating it

- Recep Tayyip Erdoğan suggested French security forces knew of attack
- Turkish President said the West is 'playing games with the Islamic world'
- Said: 'French citizens carried out massacre, and Muslims pay the price'

The President of Turkey has suggested French security forces are to blame for the deadly terrorist attacks in Paris last week, since the culprits had recently served prison sentences. Recep Tayyip Erdoğan accused the West of 'playing games with the Islamic world', warning fellow Muslims to be 'aware'. Erdoğan said Muslims are 'paying the price' for the attacks on satirical magazine Charlie Hebdo and a Jewish kosher supermarket in Paris last week.

The title of the book is a translation of part of Proverbs 24:6, which Ostrovsky alleges is the former motto of the Mossad: be-tahbūlōt ta`aseh lekhā milkhamāh (Hebrew: לך תעשה בתחבולות (מלחמה), which loosely translates to "By Way of Deception, Thou Shalt Do War."
